Budapest

is a sprawling city of over 2 million people, The focal point of the city is the Danube River, which bisects the city into two distinct parts, Buda and Pest.

Residential Buda is on a small scale with the castle the focal point, built on the hills and high river terraces of the western side. Pest is the commercial lively part of town, on a large, plain across to the east.

Budapest's nightlife has thrown aside the inhibitions of the communist era, and now offers great bars, clubs casino's and adult shows. They tend to come and go quickly - so always check with your rep as the ones in your guidebook may no longer be open. The tourist board issues a monthly program in English, and the local Budapest Sun has listings of the weekly events.

All weekends booked in Budapest come with free holiday insurance and airport transfers.
